Excerpt: . . . at first, if pieces of Mulberry 1 av. sare laid by or oyer them they soon commence eating. They may be placed on papers or cloths, and laid on tables whilst hatching, and fed there a few days, when they are removed on a net work frame, and there to be fed until the tune of spuing their balls. Rut in no wise must they be exposed to the rays of the sun either the eggs or worms The lime for propagation is when the foliage becomes sufficient for stripping to feed the worms We learn that in Kurope they have but one hatching season, which is about the middle of May, and the last of June their feeding season is over; but a mode has been discovered among us of late by some of our experimenting fellow countrymen to procrastinate the eggs from...
