The space has people in it. I, like you, am crazy about ghosts, just as they are about us. Their movements can be sudden and empathetic, with incision of nail, through a space, above or below, holding a hand, you suddenly discover a sandy interior, moving through a sensory deprivation experience, I took your hand and felt it slip from the room, when, if ever, do I get to - does anyone get to - proceed? They can be left, right. By yourself or lonely. On the road or through the meadow. With internal logic, as a cat. I turned my back just once to the empty space in my bedroom and now I have a ghost named Christopher. Allison Carter s narratives are virtuosic in craft and scope. There is also great humor and precision, But babies come from many places/and they are easy to grab at/through the rattling branches. Her poetry is an all-around pleasure to read, and it stays with me, like a consoling friend. -Noelle Kocot Human echolocation is an ability of humans to detect objects in their environment by sensing echoes from those objects. Deploying complex language-polyrhythmic, repetitive, reverberant, resounding-with an eerie proficiency, Allison Carter s writing performs a kind of linguistic human echolocation that articulates, navigates, and wayfinds space-physical, relational, emotional, and otherwise.-all within a network of deceptively familiar frames....
